“FIFA has always attempted to distil the beautiful art of football into a video game for the masses,” FIFA 20 Commercial Director David Rutter said. “From player animations to ball physics to the new, intense HyperMotion Technology, our creators have worked hard to deliver an experience that spans the entire football world and that is accessible to all fans. We’re proud to share what we’ve achieved and excited about what’s yet to come.” FIFA 22 will include 3-4 player difficulty settings, including a new beginners and practice mode. Regular updates will make regular changes to game modes, game flow, and the overall look of FIFA. These updates are designed to add an element of freshness and add new depth to the game. “We’re delivering more than ever with FIFA 22,” said FIFA Executive Producer Matt Whalen. “We’re giving fans the tools to shape the league and a chance to compete in all modes. They’ll also be able to adjust the matches themselves to suit their style.” In FIFA 22, the number of player available to play during team-select matches will be doubled to a total of 9 across the 11 worldwide leagues. A new FIFA Ultimate Team will allow players to play against other footballers and attempt to create the best looking Ultimate XI. FIFA 22 includes several content packs that will release over the next few months. The FIFA 22 Pro Evolution Soccer 2019, in addition to the full game, will include many features. These include Pro Attack Maneuvering, Reliable Connectivity, Dynamic Player Contract System, Performance Trainer, and more. FIFA 22 will launch for Xbox One and PlayStation 4 in Fall 2019.
